

Don't look where you fell but where you slip

Good morning to you all, Today I Raghvendra Sharan Singh Tomar is going to speak on the topic 'Don't look where you fell but where you slip.'

Mistakes are inevitable part of our life no matter how efficient or careful we are but there is always a chance that we may commit a mistake.

If we were to stop looking at the mistake and search out the root cause of the mistake, not only would we understand the fall better but we would be better equipped to find out the next banana peel. We need to pick up the banana peel than we slipped on rather than cursing the floor where we fell.

When things go wrong in life, spend less time worrying about the things that went wrong and more about the cause of the mistake this will help us not to repeat the same pattern over and over.

Believe me, the damage that a problem can cause is much less than that which one can do to himself or herself by just thinking about it the entire day. Therefore, at the end I would like to conclude by saying that rather than grieving over the loss incurred one should move forward towards finding the solution of the problem caused this will not only help us in avoiding it but in overcoming such situations in future.

-----Thank You-----
